

Syria's Salafi-Islamist 'Revolution'

Despite all the video of atrocities by foreign fanatics in Syria, western sources continue to claim that the 'Syrian Revolution' is mainly secular. This idea is promoted by the US, which has tried to separate the al-Qaeda-linked Jabhat al-Nusra from the 'Free Syrian Army' (FSA).

Yet 29 FSA groups responded: 'We are all al-Nusra', identifying strongly with the fanatics. A review of the major armed groups in Syria shows that ALL major groups appear to be Islamist, a vital common factor against a Syrian government committed to maintaining a secular and multicultural nation.

There are differences between groups. But the 'Military Revolutionary Council' in Aleppo is Islamist, as is the Military Police. All the largest groups (Tahweed, Farook, Liwaa al-Ummah, Khalid bin Walid, Mohamed Sultan Fateh, Ahrar al Sham) are Salafi or Muslim Brotherhood backed. The most prominent army defectors are also Islamists, committed to a religious state: such as Brigadier General Zaki al Louli, Lt Mohammed Tlas and Colonel Abduljabbar Oqaidi.

Following are some details of FSA's Islamist and Jihadi credentials. 'Jihadi' here means those engaged in armed struggle to overthrow the Syrian secular system and establish a Salafi-Islamic state.

The 'Sunni Card', played by the US and the Saudis, refers not to Sunnis but to Sunni fundamentalists - Salafis and Salafi-Takfiris - who will attack other Muslims. Claiming to represent 'real muslims', they help divide the region.
